DEDICATION

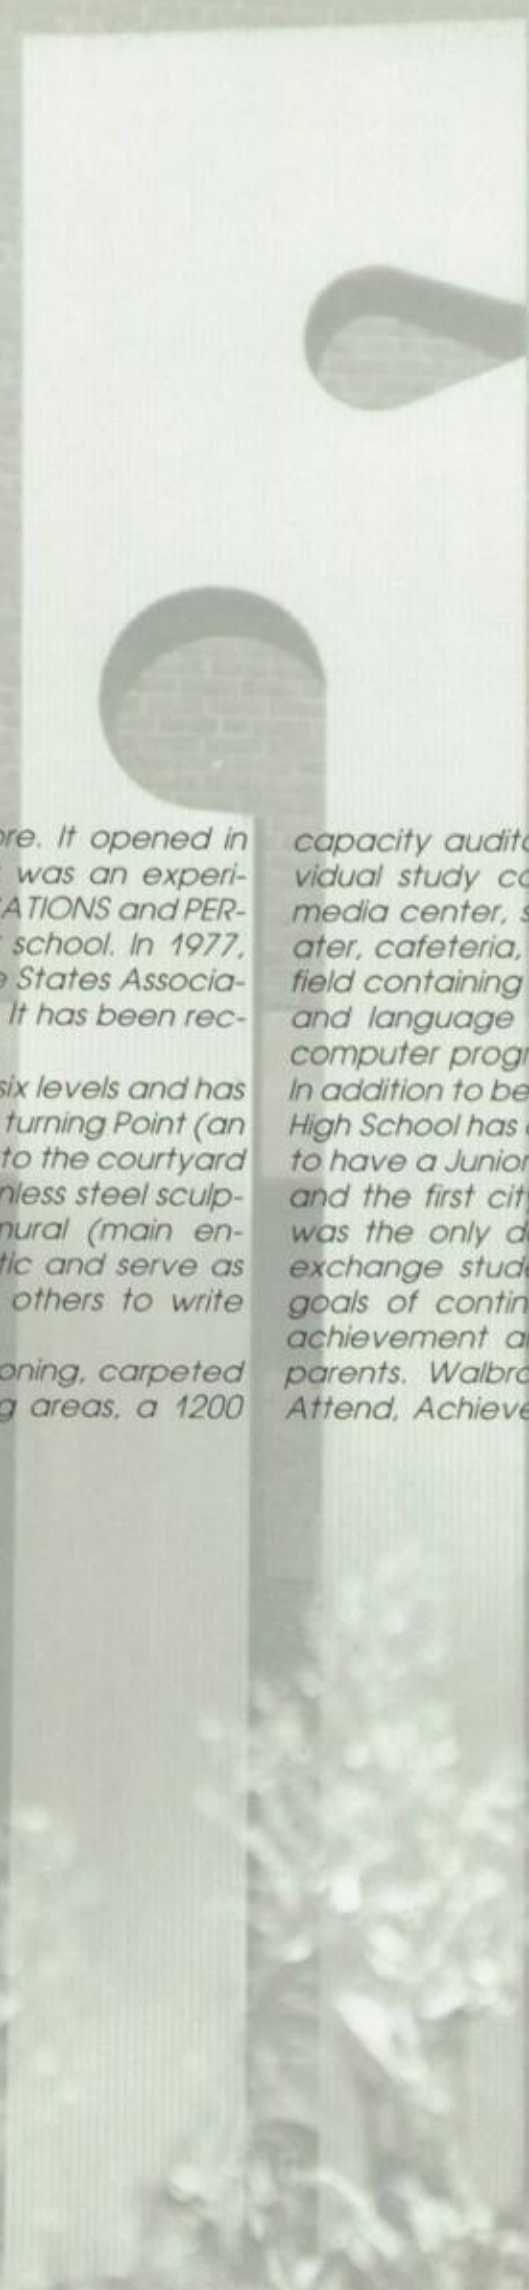

To the retiring staff of Walbrook Senior High School, Mrs. Reva Lewie, Art Department Head, we as the graduating seniors are dedicating the 1986 Warrior. Your contributions to this school will forever be remembered and perpetuated through the excellence of academic achievement and the memories upon which we will reflect. Without a doubt we will miss you and your unique qualities as well as your undying patience. We thank you for all of your support and advice, along with the joy and happiness you gave to us.

*Best Wishes As You Retire,
May God continue to Bless and keep you
Class of 1986*

WALBROOK'S HISTORY

Our school is located in West Baltimore. It opened in 1971 after two years of preparation. It was an experimental school, specializing in COMMUNICATIONS and PERFORMING ARTS. It was the first trimester school. In 1977, the school was accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It has been recognized as a State Model in Curriculum.

Our 16 million dollar project consists of six levels and has on display three imposing sculptures: The turning Point (an aluminum sculpture which was lowered into the courtyard by helicopter). The question Mark (a stainless steel sculpture), and a surrealistc underwater mural (main entrance) These contribute to the aesthetic and serve as examples for art classes to study and others to write about and enjoy.

Our school is equipped with air conditioning, carpeted classrooms with moveable walls, reading areas, a 1200 capacity auditorium with an open stage concept, individual study carrels, functional learning spaces, library media center, studio areas in art and music, amphi theater, cafeteria, gymnasium, swimming pool, and athletic field containing tennis courts. Walbrook also has science and language laboratories, a college resource room, computer program center (PLATO), and seminar rooms. In addition to being a state model in curriculum, Walbrook High School has outstanding achievements. It was the first to have a Junior Naval ROTC in the Baltimore area (1980) and the first city chapter of the National Art Society. It was the only dominately black school to have foreign exchange students. Reflecting the Walbrook tradition, goals of continuing growth, individual excellence and achievement are supported by faculty, students, and parents. Walbrook continues to be a Triple A School. Attend, Achieve, Advance.

FACULTY RETREAT

WALBROOK'S PRINCIPAL

Mr. Billups with Mohammed Ali - 1985

The CLASS of 1986 will be remembered as an outstanding collection of young people, with many sub sets of excellence. You have made a multiplicity of unique contributions to your school through academic accomplishments, athletic achievements, and positive activities in school and in the community. During the past four years, I have gained immense respect for you individually and collectively. Your skills, talents and abilities have been honed, fine-tuned and made ready for the move to the next level of your life's work. As you depart the hallowed halls of Walbrook Senior High School, it is my sincere wish that your time at Walbrook has been both academically challenging and socially rewarding. You will be remembered for the very special relationships that you established and maintained with your class sponsors, your teachers and your counselors.

Please remember that the success which you will achieve from your chosen career will be directly proportionate to the time and effort that you invest in the career. Hard work alone will not ensure success, but few succeed without it.

On behalf of the Walbrook Senior High School Staff and Faculty, I extend sincere best wishes for success in all of your future endeavors.

Yours truly,

*Samuel R. Billups, Jr.

The English Department strives to promote quality teaching and maximum learning. In trying to realize these objectives, the department is concerned with discriminate listening, appropriate speech, effective reading, and class clear writing.

The goals of the English Department are to provide the resources, opportunities and training that enable students to gain skills that are needed to function in today's society. In addition to reading, speech, literature, composition, drama, and journalism courses are offered. The department strives to meet the individual needs of each student presenting a challenge and enrichment in the lives of students and teachers.

Furthermore, the English staff is a team of professionals ready daily to meet the challenges and the educational needs of each student. Each staff member goes "the extra mile", in the interest of the student whether in the classrooms as an instructor, on the court or field as a coach, or as an adviser to a class or special activity. The English staff continues to strive to be the educational leaders in the building and are seriously dedicated to the business of educational.

Mrs. Anna Sencion

Learning a second language is challenging and exciting. In an age when travel and communication facilities bring continents closer together, it has become imperative for the students to seek a better understanding of the many people who make up the community of nations. Whether at home or abroad, in our foreign language classes we encourage our students to react to the different modes of speaking, thinking, and writing about cultures. The ultimate goal is to encourage successful achievement in the communicative skills. This goal will be sought from the earliest stages and should serve as motivation and direction for our students. Our challenge is to lead the student in an interesting and scintillating way to important discoveries: the understanding of a language to his, and concurrently the understanding of the man who speaks French, German, or Spanish as a native tongue. It is that challenge that we have accepted.

GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT

Mrs. Mabel Gee

Mrs. Eunice Hillard

Miss Lois Sherer
Department Head

Mrs. Patricia Warner

Mr. James Wood

Walbrook High School's Guidance Department has a philosophy which is congruent with that of the Baltimore City School System. The concern for the welfare of helping students develop their potential whether work or education oriented, is basically what the Guidance Department is all about. The community is viewed as an important force in the delivery of services to students as well as a reservoir of opportunity. It is the belief that the guidance extends beyond the school. All program adaptations have a single focus—to help all students achieve the most from their high school experience for the off-setting and accomplishing of their goals. This requirement relates to our belief that the guidance program must be a set in concern for the benefit of all students; an approach of the Guidance Department is "basically oriented toward recognizing and understanding of the student as an individual. It is believed that guidance should enable students to make a realistic appraisal of their own personalities, abilities, interests, and goals."

HEALTH EDUCATION

Mrs. Marian R. Finney
Dept. Head, Dim. of Health, Health Perspectives of Parenting Health Care EMC

Health Education focuses on the quality of life of the "whole person". The teaching of health uses the Holistic Approach-the interrelationship of physical, mental and social aspects of health as they arise from the attempts of individuals to satisfy needs. The major objectives of the program is to make students and their families wise consumers of health products and services. There is an inherent imbalance in the health marketplace; therefore, individuals must acquire an understanding of the sophisticated scientific knowledge and highly technical skills of the suppliers of health products and services in order to make wise decisions concerning the health of themselves and their families. Health Education I, a citywide required course introduces this concept, and it is further reinforced through the electives offered in the Health Department.

"Dimensions of Health Programs" deals with current health problems and issues. "Health Perspectives of Parenting" stresses skills necessary for successful parenting. "Emergency Medical Care" provides students an opportunity to become certified in CPR and first aid. "Health Care Delivery System" gives students an opportunity to become familiar with the many rewarding and varied careers while "Current Trends in Mental Health" assists students in identifying situations that can create mental health problems. This year the department has added an Adolescent Blood Pressures Project which focus identifying students with elevated blood pressure deucating and teaching methods of relaxation as one form of treatment.

HOME ECONOMICS

Mrs. Katherine P. Regan
Department Head Food and Nutrition,
Catering, Personal Development

Ms. Tywana Perry
Consumer Economics Fashion Design,
Clothing I, Personal Development

Home Economics is as much an integral part of the education program at Walbrook High School as it is an integral part of everyone's life and lifestyle. Home Economics is a vehicle for attaining personal satisfaction and prevocational skills. The curriculum addresses independent living skills, money management, clothing, construction, food preparation and nutrition. Home Economics helps students acquire relevant social and occupational competency. The program develops for the student positive self concepts and positive attitudes. Home Economics helps students clarify values and choose satisfying behavior patterns in the process of personal development. Other goals and objectives focus on meeting the changing responsibilities occuring in the home and family and in career choices and the job market.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS DEPARTMENT

Mr. Wallace Baden
Department Head, Metal Shop

Mr. Khalil T. Adolemau Bey
Graphic Arts (Printing), Mechanical Drawing

Industrial Arts and Vocational Training make a unique contribution to the objective of the entire school program. Basically, Industrial Arts is a laboratory curriculum area that emphasizes the use of tangible media in problem solving; therefore, it produces expressional opportunities in learning. The main goal of the department is to provide real learning opportunities for all students. There is a strong belief in the worth of the individual. The program embodies the belief that a specialized type of training is for the gifted and slow learner as well as the average student. A primary goal, in Industrial Arts teaching, is motivation and achievement through success for each student. This success is often transferred to academic areas and help crystalize plans for the future.

Applied Math 11,111

We believe that mathematics is an essential element, in our cultural heritage. It represents man's physical world in terms of quantitative measure. We believe that mathematics is indispensable to the education man worth learning for its own sake.

The world of today demands more technical knowledge on the part of more people than the world of tomorrow will demand an increased number of technical knowledgeable citizens. Mathematics should be taught in a way which might be used in the future as well as contemporary applications. We believe that education throughout life is necessary in a dynamic democratic society. Rapid change due to automation and advances in technology make it possible to forecast which occupations will become obsolete and what new jobs will be created in the future. We, therefore, believe that all high school students should study the necessary prerequisite mathematics content which would enable them to continue the study of appropriate mathematics and related courses in post secondary schools and colleges.

The Media Center strives to meet the needs of student by providing resource materials and services that are most meaningful to the growth and development of our students. A smooth effective school Media Center program is dependent upon cooperative planning of students, teachers, and librarians Because of the importance of education today, the Media Center stresses that each student read a minimal of two books a month.

The Communications Department at Walbrook Senior High School is designed to expose students to every aspect of media, such as different media, career opportunities, and the technical aspects of radio and television.

Chief George Lamison
Naval Science 1

Chief William Patterson
Naval Science 11

Commander Edmund Turner
Department Head, Naval Science

Naval Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps is a very vital part of the learning program here at Walbrook. The program is geared toward building higher standards in citizenship and self-discipline. The students are molded into more responsible persons and given opportunities to explore their leadership potential.

The cadets are exposed to first hand information about the military from class instructors with military experience. Commander E. Turner, Chief W. Patterson and Chief G. Lamison conduct Naval Science courses to help further reinforce the importance of Sea Power in America's National Security. The NJROTC believes that the sea, like itself, is a stern taskmaster. The best way to get along with either is to learn all you can then do your best, and don't worry especially about things over which you have no control.

PERFORMING ARTS

Mrs. Gloria Street
Department Head Piano Keyboard Music Theatre, Chorus

Ms. Harriet Wallace
Dance and Bodybuilding

Mrs. Bertha Guthrie
Drama and Speech

Mr. Jacob Saulsbury
Music and Band

Here at Walbrook, it is known that the Performing Arts Department is a great asset to our reputation. It includes music (vocal and instrumental), drama, and dance. It has been said that the value of a performer's skill is most fully realized when one gives the benefit of that skill in performance to others. Musicians, actors, and dancers need the motivation which performing for others can give. Public performance offers an opportunity for student-teacher planning of interesting and worthwhile programs for different types of audiences. Performance provides a means for raising the standards of taste of the performer as well as that of the audience. According to Mrs. Guthrie, the drama teacher, the purpose for drama at Walbrook is to instill within students the need to express themselves in a dramatic way, as well as to encourage students to appreciate and participate in theatrical performances.

Everything has movement. "All dance is movement, but not all movement is dance." Mrs. Wallace, the dance teacher, feels the purpose for dance at Walbrook is to use movement, music, space, and imagination to express or convey a message. The ability to share this unique movement so that feelings and thoughts are felt by the observer is a major concern. Even though there are a variety of forms in dance, the movement is unique within itself. Some types of programs may be geared largely to entertainment, but for the most part, performances have definite educational values.

At the end of the science experience the student will be able to: apply the nature of scientific inquiry of daily living realizing that science is an open intellectual activity, and what is presently known or believed is subject to change at anytime; recognize the limitation of science and scientific method. Demonstrate an understanding of man's urban environment by comparison of natural and man made environments with their its man caused environmental problems; demonstrate such skill as investigation laboratory, techniques, use of expression, reading and interpretation of printed materials. Explore and expand of basic interest in various fields of science. In so doing, this interest may extend into an occupation, profession, or recreational activity if so inclined.

Social Studies is the study of man's social relationship, both past and present, and draws information from many disciplines. Those taught here at Walbrook include U.S. History, Urban Studies Citizenship and Government, World Geography, Economics, Sociology, Law, and Western Civilization. Several are taught at the honors level.

The Primary objective of our Social Studies program is to teach students to think for themselves and to develop a set of values based upon the worth and dignity of each human being. To work toward this goal we expose our students to both the facts upon which the social studies are founded and the use of the acquired information. Our methods go beyond the traditional classroom and extend to the use of microcomputers, assemblies, field trips, guest speakers, simulations, research projects, and participation in community-based programs and contests. Walbrook's Social Studies program is based upon the assumption that our democratic society depends upon citizens who make rational decisions in the contest of the rapid cultural change in which the citizen both participates and directs.

PROFILE

Walbrook High School opened in 1971 as a flexible non-traditional high school. It is a zoned comprehensive school, accredited in 1977 by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Located in West Baltimore, Walbrook's 16 million dollar multi-level physical plant consists of six levels. It has an open courtyard with two imposing steel sculptures: "Turning Point" and Question Mark." Features of the building include: air-conditioned, carpeted classrooms with moveable walls; reading areas; a 1200 capacity auditorium with an open stage concept; individual study carrels; functional learning spaces; library media center; study areas in art and music; amphitheatre; cafeteria; gymnasium; swimming pool and athletic fields. The school also has a reading center, science and language laboratories, a college-career resource room, computer program center and seminar rooms.

The staff of over 105 professionals serves a student population of 2000 young adults, 1700 of whom live in the school's zoning area and over 300 students from all over the city who attend Walbrook because of the Communication Arts Emphasis Program and NJROTC.

Walbrook's goal is to have students, faculty and parents support the "Walbrook Tradition" of continuous growth, individual excellence and achievement. Walbrook is the triple A school whose motto is "Attend, Achieve, Advance."

CURRICULA

At Walbrook there are four programs that lead to the diploma:

Communication Arts Emphasis Program
Special College Preparatory Program
Majors Program (College Preparatory and Job Preparatory)
Naval Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps Program (NJROTC)

Programs are also provided for those students who need remediation or resource help. Students are given concentrated assistance in the life skills competencies as well as training to equip them with marketable skills.

Walbrook was a recipient of a Ford Foundation Grant in 1982.

Maryland Secondary Schools Recognized in National Programs

13 Schools Cited For Excellence in Education

For the first time, Maryland public secondary schools have participated on a local, optional basis in the U.S. Department of Education recognition program, "Excellence in Education." These schools and their principals are: Thomas S. Wootton HS, James A. Coles; Glenelg HS, Walter Caldwell; Centennial HS, Thurman O. Butcher; Milton M. Somers MS

Samuel R. Billups, Jr., principal of Walbrook SHS (City) and representative to MASSP's Executive Committee, has received recognition in several ways recently. His school was only one of a few nationwide that was selected to be a part of Ted Sizer's Coalition of Essential Schools. (See related article.) His other honor was to be named one of three for "Outstanding Principal Award" by the Greater Baltimore Committee.

The "Outstanding Principal Award" carries with it a prize of $1,500 to be used in the school. Some of Sam's prize will go for new band uniforms while the rest will go to other school programs. He was also an honored guest at a reception at the Sheraton Inner Harbor Hotel recently.

Samuel R. Billups, Jr.

City School Joins Brown University Partnership Project

Principal Sam Billups recently announced that during the current school year, Baltimore's Walbrook High School will revise a portion of the school's curriculum, implementing the design of Brown University's Coalition of Essential Schools. The Coalition, now in its second year, comprises ten schools, elementary and secondary, in Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Maryland, New York and Texas.

At Walbrook, the experiment, conceived to continue several years, this year will include approximately 200 students organized as a school-within-a-school. Based on the theories of Brown Professor Theodore R. Sizer, the program's director, the new Walbrook design will divide the instructional day into four segments: Inquiry and Expression, History and Philosophy, Mathematics and Science, and Literature and the Arts. At Walbrook, electives will be included in one segment.

The most dramatic change for a school joining the coalition is the curricular restructuring which deemphasizes electives, concentrating both time and school resources on the students' task of "learning to use their minds well." Under the experiment, the school sets one essential goal, "that each student demonstrate mastery of a limited number of essential skills and areas of knowledge." The rule which dominates program planning is, "Less is more."

Under the Brown regimen, teachers' class loads are limited to eighty students whose program reflects a maximum degree of individualization. The student is a worker, assisted by a teacher-coach, in contrast with the traditional concept of "teacher as deliverer of educational services." The staff's posture consistently reflects high expectations.

Walbrook Principal Samuel R. Billups, Assistant Principal Marilyn Rondeau, and a team of teachers began their project training in Providence. They will work with consultants and Brown's staff to train Walbrook's faculty, parents, and community.

For further information, contact Samuel R. Billups at 396-0721.

REFLECTIONS FROM ONE GREAT CLASS OF '86

The Class of 1986, Walbrook Senior High School, arrived in the Fall of 1982. New additions to the Walbrook family, we quickly showed that we had all of the capabilities to deal with the tasks that will lead us to walk across the stage on June 6th of this year. Teachers soon found that the Class of '86 was only freshman in age; we were seniors in mind from the start. The class organized and elected officers. Those elected to office were Jacqueline Johnson, president, Roxanna Brooks, vice president, La Detria Worsham, secretary, Lisa Robinson, assistant secretary, Arthur Cooke, historian and Damon Brown, treasurer. We had a traditional class day and the year was highlighted by our class trip to Great Adventures.

In the Sophomore year, the class was stronger and wiser, more mature and better than before. For the most part, class leadership remained the same except for three changes. The new secretary was Tamara Gibbs. The offices of historian and treasurer went to Sean Thompson and Samuel Robinson, respectively. A student in homeroom 1060, Wayne Duncan, came up with a replacement motto for "There's not a problem that we can't fix, cause we're the Class of '86." The new motto was "Brains and intelligence are a strong mix, enhanced and committed by the Class of '86." Instead of a prom, we held the Sophomore Dance in the Starlight Ballroom where Bernard Smith and Denise Taylor were voted Mr. and Miss Sophomore. We had our traditional Class Week and the class trip was to Kings Dominion.

The Junior year was the most eventful for the Class of '86. "Leadership wise," there were only four offices remaining. The officers remaining were president, Jacqueline Johnson, vice president, Roxanna Brooks; newly promoted secretary Lisa Robinson; and historian Sean Thompson. As far as activities went, the Class made history by being the first underclassmen to ever beat the seniors in the Junior-Senior game. We had our traditional Junior Week that was culminated by the Junior Prom at Blue Crest North. The class motto again underwent plastic surgery. Again Wayne Duncan, now of 1160, came up with the motto that will follow us into Walbrook history. "Strong in wisdom, strong in mind, the Class of '86 is one of a kind."

The Senior year is now

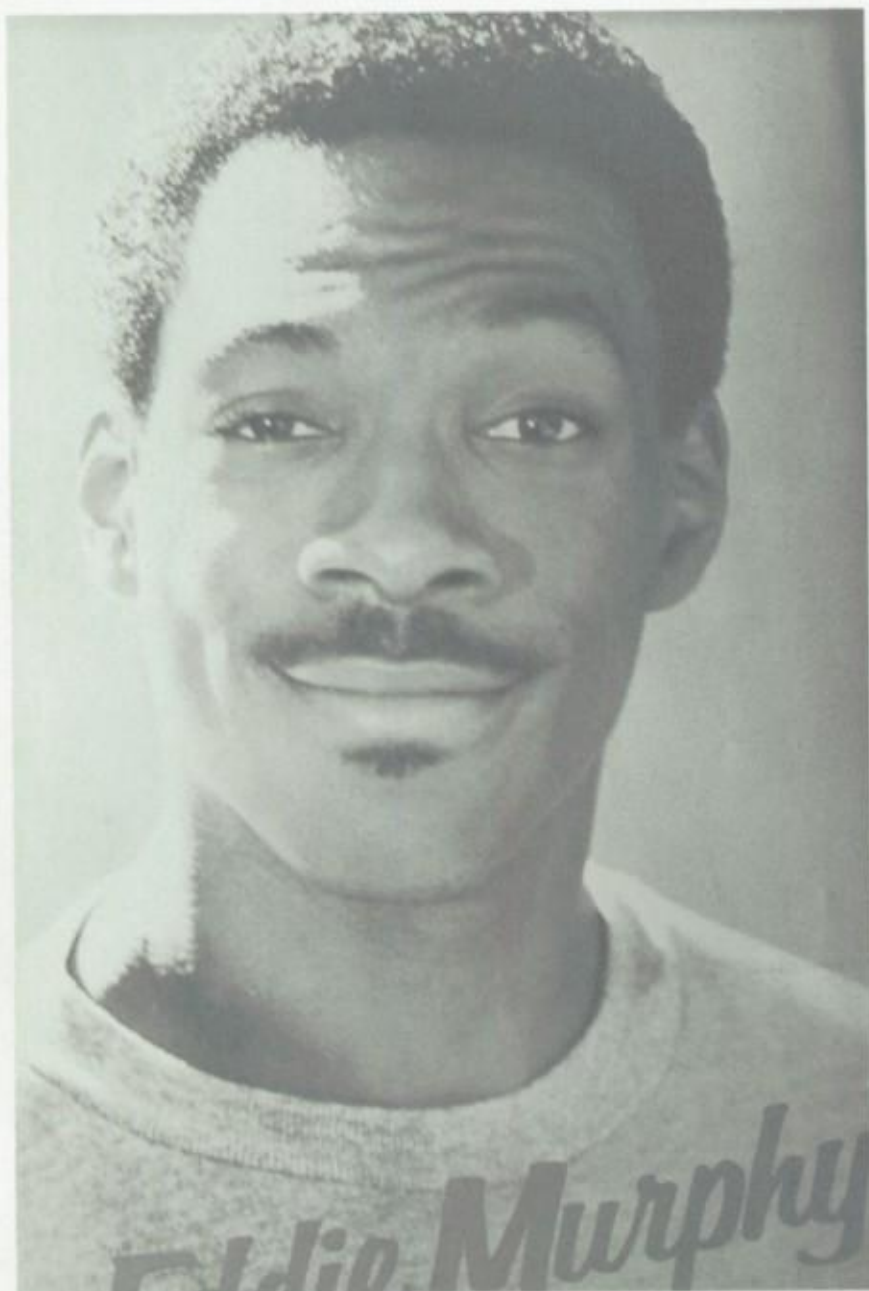

halfway over with. Today's date is January 16, 1986 and the first day of exams have been completed. These are the happenings of the class so far. Class leadership has not changed at all. The four officers from the Junior year are still in office at this date with no additional officers being added on. So far this school year Walbrook and most of all the Class of '86 have achieved a lot, both academically and athletically. Walbrook finished third in the city in writing proficiency scores last year. On the basketball court, the Warriors, 11 out of 14 being seniors, won the Poet-Laker Tournament, the La Plata Christmas Tournament, and presently own a 11-1 record. As for the future plans this year for the Class of 1986, we still have Senior Week, Senior Farewell, the Senior Prom at Martin's West, and Commencement Exercises on June 6, 1986. As for Walbrook, she will remember us as being "Strong in Wisdom, Strong in mind, we are the Class of 1986 and we are one of a kind!!!"
